Missing skills

The team is listening to each other well

People are not doing their work on time; I'm worried we will slip the date

We can't agree on a process or who should do what so we aren't getting anything done

I like how we give each other feedback to make our work better

We send updates out by email and not everyone responds. We need a different way to coordinate.

The project manager told me loudly in a meeting that my work wasn't important. I feel humiliated

Kudos to my manager who complimented my skill and gave me a new challenge

I feel dismissed; my team is so impatient when I share an idea

People are making decisions about the product without including everyone involved

What should we talk about?
